CANADA

The special focus of this newsletter is the attempt by the National Council of Canadian Muslims to have the Trudeau Liberals declare January 29th a National Day of Remembrance and Action on Islamophobia.

We condemn violence against Muslims in the strongest terms. However, we do not believe that a single random attack, as occurred last year at a Quebec mosque, should become the basis for a multi-year commemoration marking out Islamophobia as Canada's national shame. The unmistakable message of such a commemoration would be that Islam is a specially-protected ideology and Muslims a specially protected people, exempt from criticism and worthy of sympathy above and beyond what is offered to other victims of violence.

Such a day should not be endorsed by a democratic nation built on equality before the law and freedom of expression.

Here's why we don't need a national Islamophobia day by Lorne Gunter

When it was first reported last week that 11-year-old Toronto grade-school student Khawlah Noman had been followed to school by some whack job who wanted to cut off her hijab using scissors, the forces of political correctness were swift to condemn the incident. However, when the "attack" turned out to be nothing more than a child's fib (the dog ate my hijab), there was no similar rush to correct the record, to say that maybe Canada isn't a pit of Islamophobia after all. It's the one-sidedness of political correctness – and the fickle, fashionable nature of its outrage – that makes the push for a national policy against Islamophobia and even a national anti-Islamophobia Day such bad ideas.

The federal government has been asked by the National Council of Canadian Muslims (NCCM) to declare Jan. 29, the first anniversary of a murderous attack on a Quebec mosque that left six dead and several others injured, a "National Day of Remembrance and Action on Islamophobia." We deplore the horrific Quebec City mosque murders. Nevertheless, an annual day of national atonement sends the wrong message.

Canada: "Islamophobia Day"? Are You Kidding? By Tom Quiggin

The Prime Minister of Canada, Justin Trudeau, is being asked by the National Council of Canadian Muslims (NCCM, formerly known as CAIR CAN) to designate January 29 as a "National Day of Remembrance and Action on Islamophobia." If he does, it is an indicator that the Islamists in Canada have succeeded in their program of political expansion and influence to the point of now being able publicly to manipulate the Prime Minister's Office. In fact, in Canada, "Islamophobia" comes in only fourth behind crimes against Blacks, Gays and Jews. Hate crimes against Muslims have dropped, even as the overall number of hate crimes increase, according to the last Statistics Canada reporting.

If the "Islamophobia Memorial Day" is declared by the prime minister, it is a clear "indicator and warning" on how far an Islamist mentality has been developed within the corridors of government. It also will further confirm how deeply Prime Minister Trudeau has continued in his support of the Islamist cause on every occasion since his election as a Member of Parliament in 2008.

Quebec Opposition Rejects Call For "Day of Action on Islamophobia"

Coalition avenir Québec and the Parti Québécois – Québec's main opposition parties – rejected a call by the National Council of Canadian Muslims (NCCM) for a National Day of Remembrance and Action on Islamophobia. Parti Québécois says the vague term "Islamophobia", is too controversial, and points out there is already a designated international day for the elimination of racial discrimination, observed annually on March 21.

The federal government is still "in reflection" on the idea of making the anniversary of the attack on a Quebec City mosque a day of action on Islamophobia, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said Thursday. Saying he wants to find the right way to commemorate the tragedy, Trudeau added the government doesn't want to spark a backlash against any minorities, either. "We want to avoid the kind of backlash we sometimes see when we launch such actions because unfortunately there is still a small, intolerant minority."

I strongly condemn all forms of violence, including violence motivated by hatred and bigotry, and I call on all Canadians to affirm their commitment to civil, open dialogue and non-violence. Publicly endowed grievance rites are inappropriate responses to isolated acts of violence. National mourning ceremonies should consecrate events that have shaped our civic character. Honouring the dead should draw people together - the whole country, not half - either to heal historic wounds, acknowledge sacrifices made on all our parts and strengthen our sense of national purpose, or to affirm solidarity in the face of calamities inflicted by a real, external enemy.

We heard about the ordeal of a Muslim girl in Canada who, on the way to school, was approached by a man with scissors who cut the end of her hijab. But documents unearthed from CSIS – some of them marked "top secret" – reveal alarming information about how Canada's spy agency views the jihadist threat, what they're doing to track it and their concerns about future attacks on home soil. It is much easier to label Trudeau as a liar with evil intentions. But like the child he appears to be, his words and actions can simply arise from a person who is not intelligent enough to do the job he has been elected to do. Trudeau's lack of grey matter will never be mentioned by Canada's mainstream media. They are way too busy reporting how Donald Trump is psychiatrically unfit to be president and should be removed from office. ## How do we define Islamophobia?

In 2017, the Canadian Parliament passed a motion, Motion M-103, condemning "Islamophobia." Yet, as Diane Bederman points out, "Islamophobia" can be defined so broadly that a law arising from Motion M-103 could preclude any reasonable discussion of Islam. And four major Canadian media outlets could offer no definition of "Islamophobia." "It is obviously a weaponized word that our leaders would do well to avoid.

We talk a great deal about Islamophobia in Canada. And rightly so. We are having discussion about Motion 103 which includes the word Islamophobia. I contacted four major media outlets and asked them for their working definition of Islamophobia. The National Post and the CBC did not reply. The other two, the Toronto Star and the Globe and Mail, said they don't have one. How can we have a meaningful conversation about Islamophobia if we do not agree upon a definition?

Students take political correctness to court

In 2013, Ryerson Students Union banned a campus pro-life club because it was pro-life. Since 2015, RSU has repeatedly rejected the Men's Issues Awareness Society (MIAS) as a campus club, because some feminists see discussion of issues facing men and boys as an ideological threat. These three Ontario student unions are hostile to the free expression and debate of ideas on campus. They hate diversity of thought. They actively prevent discussion and debate, and thereby rob students of their right to learn to think independently.

The Court has an opportunity to stop this dangerous precedent, namely, the coerced adoption of select ideological viewpoints as a prerequisite for students to benefit from fair and equal treatment by their student unions on public university campuses.

IMMIGRATION-MIGRATION

Which Migrants?

Those Europeans, such as Geert Wilders, whom we are constantly told are “far-right” and “anti-immigrant,” are neither. They are intelligently opposed to Muslim immigrants, and they should start now to voice their support for “an immigration policy that makes sense,” putting paid to the canard that they oppose all immigrants, and introducing a note of sanity to Europe’s immigration policies. ## 215,000,000 Christians Persecuted, Mostly by Muslims

The Islamic world had the lion's share of this persecution; 38 of the 50 worst nations are Muslim-majority. The report further cites "Islamic oppression" behind the "extreme persecution" that prevails in eight of the 10 worst nations. In short, the overwhelming majority of persecution that these 215 million Christians experience around the world — especially the worst forms, such as rape and murder — occurs at the hands of Muslims.

In the Islamic world, the fall of dictatorial regimes rarely seems to alleviate the sufferings of Christians. On the contrary, when secular dictators fall — Saddam in Iraq, Qaddafi in Libya, and attempts against Assad in Syria — persecution of Christian seems to rise as a grassroots byproduct. Today, Iraq is the eighth worst nation in the world in which to be Christian, Syria is fifteenth, and Libya seventh. ## International Holocaust Remembrance Day

Tomorrow marks the 73rd anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp in 1945, and has been designated as International Holocaust Remembrance Day. Since 2005, the United Nations has designated January 27 as a day of remembrance for the victims of the Holocaust, including six million Jews, and five million non-Jews who were murdered by the Nazi regime during World War II. The Holocaust will forever stand as an example of the ultimate expression of human hatred. Although it is now more than 73 years later, the lessons learned after the Holocaust still apply today and must not be forgotten. We all have a moral responsibility to continually strive to combat the forces of racism, antisemitism and bigotry wherever they are found.
