It's time we really took a look at Trudeau's political philosophy by Anthony Furey

“Canada is an open and welcoming country, but let me be clear — we are also a country of laws,” Trudeau said in Montreal recently. These were his toughest words so far yet still they never actually stated the basics: That these crossings are illegal and should not be happening. Michelle Rempel, the Conservative critic on the file, recommended a number of social media postings Trudeau could make to set the record straight, like: “If you illegally enter Canada, you will be arrested and detained by the RCMP” and “I apologize for my #WelcomeToCanada tweet which may have made you think otherwise.”

The Prime Minister of Canada, Justin Trudeau, spoke out after a mosque fire in Ontario last year, and that is good. Unfortunately, no such statement has come from Trudeau or his government regarding the church fire or the Islamic State graffiti. The silence is deafening and sends a loud message. Violent Leftists have been brutalizing people who stand for the freedom of speech, and they have friends in the highest places, and so your free speech rally is forbidden. The freedom of speech is dead in Canada, “Islamophobia” is officially recognized as a genuine concept, and Muslims are a special, protected class, their beliefs immune from criticism even when they are used to justify terror massacres. I suggest Singh talk to Quebec Muslim politician and former speaker Fatima Houda-Pepin, or author Djemila Benhabib. While one could argue that concerns about an near-epidemic of “Islamophobia” are being stoked in Canada (with Motion M-103 and speakers at educational institutions such as schools, colleges and universities, for example), the actual data indicate that only a minority of hate crimes target Muslims, and that Jews (although a much smaller part of the overall population of Western countries than Muslims) are the primary target. A woman who opts not to show her face in public perpetuates the hideous concept that the rest of us are less virtuous, that our faces are so intimate a feature they should be hidden. She renders us lesser beings and thus unequal. There is enough ghettoization around. These women want to ghettoize their faces.

Canada must call Islamophobia what it is - Racism

Canadian officials were in Geneva this month to answer critical questions about the country's human rights record. The appearance before the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination comes every four years and is an opportunity for racialized communities to hold our governments to account for their action, or inaction, on promoting racial equity in a pluralistic society. This year, there was a painful omission. Canada omitted identifying Islamophobia as a form of racism in its official report. This reinforces harmful narratives that can render Islamophobia invisible.

Sehrish Amjad of the National Council of Canadian Muslims (formerly CAIR-CAN) chides Canada for omitting "Islamophobia" as a form of racism in its official report to the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. But on the contrary, Canada was well advised to avoid that term.

"Islamophobia" implies that any fear of Islam is irrational (i.e., a phobia), whereas it may be perfectly rational to fear Islam, given the many terror attacks carried out in its name, as well as the oppression of non-Muslims in many Muslim countries. The term Islamophobia deliberately conflates discrimination against people who are Muslim (which is wrong) with any criticism of Islam or its doctrines and scriptures (which in a society that respects freedom of expression is perfectly acceptable). While "Islamophobia" has not been defined under Canadian law, it has been defined by organizations such as the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and individual Muslim countries to include not only discrimination against Muslim, but criticism of anything concerning Islam. Such criticism is a crime punishable by imprisonment or even death in some Muslim countries. For a Canadian document to use the term Islamophobia would imply the acceptance of the definition currently used by the OIC and in some Muslim countries. But that definition is not compatible with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. To use it in a Canadian document would be careless, or worse.

Amjad refers obliquely to Motion M-103, a disastrous Private Members' motion that the House of Commons passed on March 23, 2017, when he writes that "the federal government is gearing up to study Islamophobia ...." While M-103 is "only a motion, not a bill," the government's actions could be interpreted as signalling that legislation based on this motion is in the works, which could quell free speech in Canada. A conference on the implications of M-103 is being held in Toronto on Sunday, September 10 (see canadiancitizens.org).

Yours sincerely,

Madeline Weld

CANADA MUST CALL ISLAMOPHOBIA BY TRUE NAME .... Wed, Aug 30, 2017

Sehrish Amjad identifies herself as a human rights officer at the National Council of Canadian Muslims (the former CAIR-CAN). She should be asked whether her organization subscribes to the definition of human rights to which Canada subscribes, i.e. the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the U.N. in 1948, or to the alternate definition, the Cairo Declaration, written as a rebuttal to the UN Declaration by the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) - namely "Human Rights is Sharia". The two definitions are incompatible and some who subscribe to the OIC definition are quite knowledgeable and adept at using Canada's human rights legislation to advance their own version of human rights, i.e. Sharia.

Racism is "prejudice, discrimination or antagonism directed against someone of a different race based on the belief that one's own race is superior". The reason that racism is universally decried is that one is born with certain racial DNA, which cannot be changed and for which one should not suffer discrimination. Religion, on the other hand, is a choice. Even if one is born into a family which practices a particular religion, he/she can choose to leave it for another religion or for atheism. It is not immutable. Also, it is a belief system, an ideology, which is, and should be, open to criticism, unlike one's DNA. Finally, Islam, like Christianity, has adherents from almost all races on earth, so criticism of either religion cannot logically be said to be inspired by racism.

This attempt, and the attempt in Motion M-103, to link "Islamophobia" to systemic racism, smacks of yet another attempt by the NCCM to maximize claimed victimhood on the part of Muslims by employing not only "religious discrimination", but also "systemic racism", thereby allowing broader government legislative and policy "remedies" and preventative measures. It would be wise for the NCCM and their brother organizations to consider that, if the definition of racism were to be broadened to include religious discrimination, this would open the door for Christians and Jews and others to likewise avail themselves of the opportunity to make claims of "prejudice, discrimination or antagonism directed against [them by] someone of a different religion, based on the belief that [that person's] own religion is superior". The outcome could prove embarrassing.

The Liberals show a lack of seriousness dealing with the border crisis

Trudeau will gush "To those fleeing persecution, terror & war, Canadians will welcome you, regardless of your faith. Diversity is our strength #WelcomeToCanada." To be followed by a cabinet flunky reminding potential newcomers there is a process for refugee claimants that could take months or years, with only a 50/50 chance of success. So while the boss is free to rhapsodize about Canada's completely open-door policy, his ministers are left with the task of dealing with nagging little details, like, national security screenings and refugee determination hearings.

Charlie Hebdo: Still Standing Up For Freedom

Its Barcelona cover wasn't Islamophobic – it was a plea for free speech. Since the murderous Islamist attack on its offices in 2015, the French satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo has – perhaps understandably – held back on its criticism of Islam. But last week it once again made headlines for daring to question Islam with its cover (below) in response to the Barcelona attacks. 'Islam, religion of peace... eternal!' the headline said, next to a cartoon showing two bloodied bodies with a van speeding off into the distance. Fans of Charlie have heralded it a return to form. But others, predictably, have attacked the magazine, claiming it is tarring all Muslims with the terrorist brush and fuelling Islamophobia.

New NGO Racket: Smuggling, Inc.

In recent years Europe has been on the receiving end of one of the most significant migrant crises in history. At the start of this summer, a group called "Defend Europe" raised money to hire and sail a ship off the coast of Italy. The ship aimed to deter migrants from crossing the Mediterranean. One activist was recorded saying, "We want to get a crew, equip a boat and set sail to the Mediterranean ocean to chase down the enemies of Europe." Some of the other characters and rhetoric associated with this movement may be equally unsavoury. For some weeks, the "Defend Europe" vessel, with banners prominently displayed, has floated in the Mediterranean and told people in a variety of languages, "No Way. You will not make Europe home" and "Stop human trafficking."

THE ENEMIES

ANTIFA

“Totalitarianism strives not toward despotic rule over men, but toward a system in which men are superfluous. Total power can be achieved and safeguarded only in a world of conditioned reflexes, of marionettes.”

~ Hannah Arendt ~

The Coming Terror by Mark Steyn

The violence on American streets derives from today's paramilitary wing of the Democrat Party – ANTIFA - working itself up over yesterday's paramilitary wing of the Democrat Party - the Ku Klux Klan. From white sheets to black bandanas is a mere fashion evolution: the purpose is the same - to do ugly things one could not confidently do with one's face known to all. As part of its general disdain for "speech", the left now brands anyone it doesn't like as "fascist", and therefore illegitimate, and ripe for a bloody good hiding: Trump, Scalise, Ann Coulter, Charles Murray, the liberal Middlebury professor who made the mistake of inviting Murray and so had to be put in hospital pour encourager les autres, reporters with cellphones, cameramen whose cameras are carelessly pointed towards antifa's energetic efforts to kill no one "to date".

<https://www.steynonline.com/8063/the-coming-terror>

A Clarion Call for Reason

Antifa's propensity for using violence as a means of silencing its enemies is particularly significant. Utterly rejecting any notion of a free and open exchange of ideas, the movement views anyone who holds a contrary political perspective as The Enemy that must be crushed by any means necessary. Thus, in the final analysis, it can accurately be said that the Antifa communists who so passionately denounce fascism, are in fact fascists themselves. The black-clad hoodlums who claim allegiance to Marxism need to be reminded that "wherever [their] heroes -- Marx, Mao, Che -- have prevailed, students, writers, teachers, scientists have been punished with hard labor or death. For what? For their opinions. For their poems. For their stories. For insufficient subservience to monolithic dogma.

Yes, ANTIFA is the moral equivalent of neo-Nazis

After Charlottesville, the media rightly demanded that President Trump and all Republicans condemn the neo-Nazis and the KKK. So where are the calls for Democrats to condemn ANTIFA — and the brutal public condemnation for those who fail to do so? If black-clad neo-Nazis had attacked peaceful protesters at a "No to Racism in America" march in Berkeley, politicians in Washington would be falling over themselves to express their disgust — and any who failed to do so would be vilified. But when neo-communists commit this kind of violence, they get a pass from the left. That cannot be allowed to stand.

The Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), a liberal, Alabama-based 501(c)(3) tax-exempt charitable organization that has gained prominence on the left for its "hate group" designations, pushes millions of dollars to offshore entities as part of its business dealings, records show. "It is unethical for any US-based charity to invest large sums of money overseas," said Casil. I don't care if the people screaming themselves into a frenzy on these marches call themselves "left" or "right", because if they are final solution merchants who think they can tell me how I should live my life, because they know what's best for everyone else, then they're anti-freedom and that is all that matters to me. I will assign meaning to my own life here on this earth. And I will face the consequences of my own fully informed choices, both here and in the afterlife, thank you very much. ## Allah: The Author of Islamophobia with Robert Spencer and David Wood David Wood explains: "Politicians and the media often accuse Western critics of Islam of spreading Islamophobia (the irrational fear of Islam).

When we turn to Islam's most trusted sources, however, we find that Islamophobia has a different source—namely, Allah himself."

Tommy Robinson: Channel 4's "Moderate" Muslims

Channel Four showed its true colours in August when a film that was meant to present Muslims in a positive light did just the opposite. Nadia Chan, a self-described Islamist, showed the world she supports terrorist organisations – and somehow the police aren't interested!

Please Pray for the People of Houston

People of faith and good will – please pray for all of those who have been impacted by Hurricane Harvey and stand with the victims and their families. Pray for all those who have lost their lives; those still in danger; those who are still missing; those who are now homeless, without support and resources. We thank the first responders who are risking their lives to save others and the everyday heroes reaching out to help their neighbors – regardless of race, colour or creed – who, like the Good Samaritan, cannot walk by a person without offering their hand in aid. This is America at her very best.
